Grandmother, ask'd Ella, what had plain funerals to do with the Stamp Act? Why, said grandmother, it had become the fashion to have the funerals very grand and expensive. Mourning clothes and ornamented mourning cards were brought from England. And, as people were determined not to use any English goods, they cut down the funerals. Didn't anybody go to see anybody buried? asked Dora, with sympathy in her voice. O yes! said grandmother, everybody went. They had great processions, and, as there were but few carriages, the larger part went on foot. The relations, however, rode on horseback. It is getting late, said Cousin Will, suddenly. I must go in order to catch the train. I am sorry we have not a leather convenience, laughed Louise, that we might send you to the depot. Cousin Will commenced with grandmother, for he was one of the rare young gentlemen of our day who are very polite to old people, and bid good night all around. When he came to Dora she drew him down to her, leaned her cheek against his for a moment, caressingly, and said, Nice Cousin Will! TELL US A STORY. BT M. H. K. The night above the sunset's gold her purple robe is trailing, While on the netherland slopes the light that lingered there is failing. From out the tufts of faded grass, faint come the cricket's crying; Back from the trees I hear the last lone katydid...
